WELCOME TO WHITE COUNTY, INDIANA

A friendly place for families and hard-working people. White County, Indiana is a friendly and safe place to live, work, and visit. Our communities are living examples of the American small-town spirit, where neighbors talk together and help each other. Families tend to stay connected, with multiple generations living near one another.

Our business community is an example of that same attitude. Local business owners work to help each other succeed. They share knowledge and resources, and appreciate the value that new companies bring to our area. We recognize that growing, healthy businesses strengthen the local economy.

Workers in White County appreciate their employers and are willing to work loyally and dependably. They appreciate being given the opportunity to earn a living for themselves and their families, and they show that appreciation in the quality of their work and their eagerness to learn new skills.

WORKING HARD AND PROUD OF WHAT WE DO

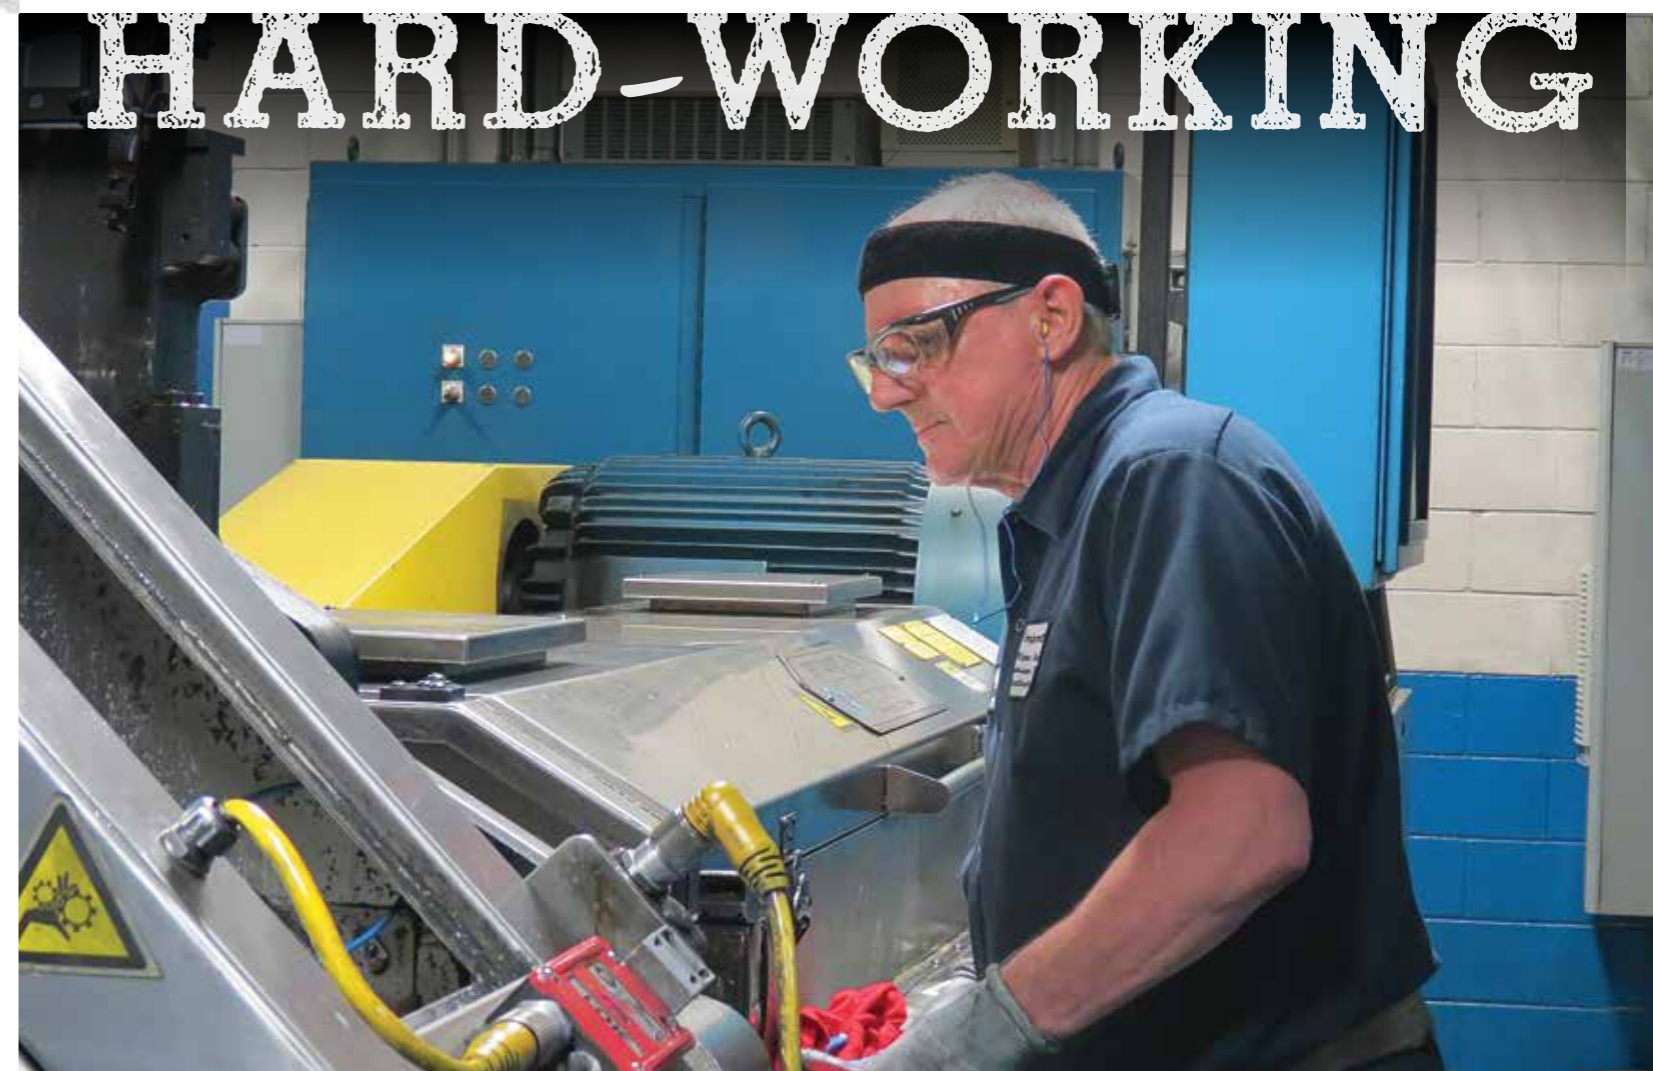

White County, Indiana is an area with a population that has been accustomed to working together and getting things done for many decades. Our area is both industrial and agricultural, so local workers understand the importance of hard work and individual initiative. The lack of local union activity is evidence of that, and Indiana is a right-to-work state, so workers are not forced to participate in unions.

Knowledge is also important in our area, and local workers are proud to gain the skills needed by employers. Our county's K-12 public school system provides preparation for many careers, and the local Ivy Tech Community College offers a Certified Production Technician program that teaches the skills today's manufacturers need. Students learn about manufacturing processes, equipment, safety, leadership, and the importance of quality. Scholarships are available to cover the cost of training.

In addition, Purdue University and the Purdue Research Park are located just 48 kilometers (30 miles) south of our area, giving employers access to many science and engineering resources.
